The Leap Motion 3D Controller uses multiple cameras and infrared light to detect hand motions in 3D space – tracking the movement of both hands and all 10 fingers with incredible speed and precision.

Enables you to operate a computer with hand movements

Tracks all 10 fingers up to 1/100th of a millimeter

Senses 8 cubic feet of interactive, three-dimensional space

Tracks movements at a rate of over 200FPS

SDK in six programming languages

Leap Motion has an active developer community where you can create, share, and discover a wide variety of open-source integrations, cool projects and fun hacks. Makers and hardware hackers can use the tracking data to control almost anything – from flying drones or manipulating robotic arms, to LEDs and 3D printers.

You can also integrate your Leap Motion 3D Controller with an Arduino, attach it to a head-mounted display like the Oculus Rift, or drive a robot controlled over Wi-Fi. With the Leap Motion image sensor, you can create head-mounted tracking software capabilities that can literally read the physical and virtual realities of the world – possibilities that are truly endless.
