Product Overview

The Alcatel OneTouch 2004C is a basic feature phone designed with senior citizens in mind. It is a device suitable for people with low vision, hearing disabilities, reduced manual dexterity and limited comprehension skills

In addition, the handset comes with a very basic menu with large icons that includes a calculator, alarm, phonebook and a LED flashlight. It also has Bluetooth technology to connect to other devices, Radio FM and hands-free features, among others.

Because this model is targeted to senior citizens, Alcatel has included a single emergency button that is located at the back of the device. Upon activating it, the phone sets an alarm off and tries to connect with five preset numbers in succession until someone picks up. It will also send a text message to each call recipient.
