The keyboard is amazingly heavy; itâ€™s carved from a single block of aluminum and seems to weigh about five pounds. It holds the iPad firmly, and is just barely heavy enough to stay put when you pull the iPad out. It would be awkward for carrying around. If you want a portable option, a wireless bluetooth keyboard is your best option to take a keyboard with you on the road.

The keyboard itself is basically Appleâ€™s keyboard with a few extra buttons where the function keys would be:

- Home
- Search
- Dim
- Bright
- Photos
- Onscreen keyboard
- A blank key that does nothing (!)
- Rewind
- Play/Pause
- Forward
- Mute
- Volume Down

Volume Up

The ergonomics are quite good. Other than the fact that itâ€™s a bit heavy, the keyboard is a pleasure to use. I really wish there was an additional dock connector on the long bottom axis so the iPad could be used in landscape mode. I check my email in landscape mode, and I tend to do all of my â€œproducingâ€• work in that mode. I wrote this review in Pages with the keyboard, and Iâ€™m quite impressed that the iPad and this keyboard could actually replace a desktop for light.
